More than $20 million sought by Benton Harbor for Riverview improvements

The city of Benton Harbor is seeking more than $20 million in federal grants to improve the area around Riverview Drive.

Southwest Michigan Planning Commission Deputy Director, Marcy Hamilton, tells us the planning commission assisted the city with drafting the application for a BUILD Grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation. The goal is safer, public access to the riverfront, safer pedestrian pathways with connections to downtown and neighborhoods, and mitigating flooding during high water events. So, how could that be accomplished?

"Creating areas where water could go, we're trying to use natural stormwater practices like green infrastructure, rain gardens, and those types of practices to take water when we have high water events," Hamilton said.

Hamilton says the city wants to see the area become a popular destination for residents and visitors, which could lead to economic development.

"We'd like to see more public area along the riverfront where there could be like a boardwalk for walking and places for people to fish and just spruce it up. It's kind of in a state of disrepair right now, so making sure that it's safe."

An application for the $21.6 million grant was personally dropped off by Benton Harbor Mayor Marcus Muhammad when he was in Washington, D.C. for an event in March.

Hamilton says the BUILD program is highly competitive, with only one round of funding this year and a whole lot of applicants. The city is likely to learn if it's receiving the grant around December or early next year.

The celebration will feature a full day of events designed to keep the energy going from morning to evening. The day begins with the Buchanan Farmers Market at The Common, offering farm-fresh produce, baked goods, artisan goods, and locally sourced products.

Early risers can also participate in Run! Buchanan, hosted by the Buchanan Area Recreation Board, featuring a 1-mile fun run, 5K, and 10K race benefiting Buchanan Parks.

Beginning at 10:00 a.m. Front Street will come alive with music from local favorite 1 Adam 12 courtesy of United Federal Credit Union.

Families can also enjoy interactive entertainment including balloon artistry by Fun Twist Balloon Creations, magic performances by John Dudley, and line dancing with the Sunset Coast Dancers in the afternoon.

Visitors are encouraged to explore Buchanan's unique downtown shops throughout the day, many of which will feature special promotions, discounts, and giveaways during the event.

The festivities continue into the evening with a Beer and Wine Garden for guests ages 21 and older, followed by a free live concert at The Common featuring the high-energy local cover band Shock Roxy.

Advance tasting wristbands are available at sipbuchanan.eventbrite.com. Tasting wristbands are $50 when purchased in advance using promo code SIP2026 before May 1 and will increase to $60 after.

More than a Feeling

Easter is a happy day. Kids hunt for eggs filled with treats and prizes. Families gather for special meals and celebrations. Church services have grand music and triumphant songs. A proclamation is heard that God is victorious.

But you are living in a post-Easter time. Easter is past. The leftovers are done or going to be tossed. The eggs for the hunt are cracked, empty, or put away. Those planning the weekend church services have shelved special music till next year. What happened?

Two disciples of Jesus felt the lows of disappointment. This was after hearing the Easter proclamation that Jesus rose from the dead. Angels preached the victory of the resurrected Jesus. Jesus already appeared alive to a few of his followers. Witnesses verified the testimony that the tomb was empty. This should have been a glorious morning, but these two were saddened.

This world is full of reasons to be sad and disappointed. Good times end. Feasts run out. People fail us. I fail others and myself. Great experiences are temporary. Emotional heights eventually lead to emotional lows or plateaus. If you need to chase the next emotional high, you are going to find yourself continually disappointed at the dips that always come.

Jesus and the blessings of Easter are more than an emotional high. The resurrected Jesus brings a constant assurance that runs deeper and stronger than feelings.

The physically risen Jesus walked with the two disappointed disciples on the road. They didn't recognize him because seeing him with their eyes wasn't the most important part. Experiencing his presence to get an emotional high wasn't what Jesus was after. Jesus wanted to deliver to them a better gift.

Jesus explained that God planned from the beginning to save all people from eternal disappointment through his death and resurrection. Jesus' life would begin to undo all that lets people down. Only then did Jesus reveal himself.

When the two relive the events of the discussion with the living Jesus, they don't emphasize the presence of Jesus but the words of Jesus. "Were not our hearts burning within us while he was speaking to us along the road and while he was explaining the Scriptures to us?" (Luke 24:32). When the Bible mentions "hearts," don't think only emotions. For those living when Luke wrote these words, the "heart" included the intellect and will as well.

The resurrection of Jesus gives you more than a fun day to celebrate once every spring. You may not always feel loved, but you are loved because of Easter. You may not always feel forgiven, but you are forgiven because of Easter. You may not always feel God's presence, but he is present because of Easter. You may not always feel happy, but the joy of Easter is stronger than a feeling. It is a reality.

God feeds us this reality through his word, just as Jesus did with the disciples on the road. Followers of Jesus, you live in the constant state of being blessed as you stay connected to him by using the Bible. Read it often and relive the Easter reality.

What are ways that you can implement connecting to God by reading the Bible?

Prayer: Dear Jesus, you are alive. You broke the chains of death. You took away all my sin. Refresh me with this truth daily as I use your word. Keep me rooted in your truth, not my emotions. Amen.

The company announced recently it will invest more than $60 million to establish a new manufacturing facility in Perrysburg, Ohio, creating between 100 and 150 jobs over the next two years.

The new plant will be Whirlpool's 11th U.S. factory and its sixth in Ohio—a state that has served as the backbone of the company's domestic manufacturing strategy for decades, particularly following the closure of several Southwest Michigan plants in the 1980s.

Whirlpool is repurposing an existing building in Perrysburg—formerly used for solar panel production—into a modern, technology-driven facility. Once complete, it will produce appliance components and subassemblies for washers and dryers, supporting nearby Ohio operations.

Chairman and CEO, Marc Bitzer, said the move reflects continued confidence in American manufacturing.

"When there is a level playing field, our American workers can out-compete anyone in the world," Bitzer said. "This investment is proof of our confidence in that workforce and our determination to win by producing high-quality, innovative products in the U.S."

The announcement comes during a period when Whirlpool has faced scrutiny from investors and flirted with 52-week lows in its stock price, making the expansion a notable signal of long-term commitment.

It also follows a larger, $300 million investment announced last fall to expand laundry production capacity in Clyde and Marion, Ohio—expected to create 400 to 600 additional jobs.

Kristin Day, Whirlpool's vice president of U.S. manufacturing, said the new facility will blend automation with skilled labor.

"We are not just building appliances—we are building the future of domestic production for our industry," Day said. "Our people remain the foundation of our success."

While this latest investment is centered in Ohio—not Southwest Michigan—it underscores Whirlpool's broader U.S. manufacturing strategy.

The company says about 80 percent of the major appliances it sells domestically are made in the United States. Over the past decade, Whirlpool has invested roughly $23 billion in U.S. manufacturing, labor and logistics, including more than $6 billion spent with American suppliers last year alone.

The Perrysburg project is expected to move forward pending final approval of state and regional incentives. A formal ribbon-cutting is anticipated later this year.

Bottom line: No new jobs locally, but for a company headquartered in Benton Harbor, this is still a positive sign—continued domestic investment, continued Midwest manufacturing strength, and a signal that Whirlpool is continuing to lean into its U.S. roots for the long haul.

TJ's Village Tavern coming to downtown Eau Claire

The popular TJ's Bar & Grill concept that has been a favorite in the Watervliet and Baroda areas is coming to Eau Claire.

TJ's Hospitality Group, owned by Joe and Tara Matthews and Greg Borr, has announced the acquisition of the Hometown Bar & Grille in downtown Eau Claire. They will 'close' on the purchase this month, then shut down the Hometown for a few weeks of updates and improvements before re-opening as TJ's Village Tavern.

"This acquisition represents a significant step in our continued growth across Michigan," the owners said in a statement circulated on social media.

Greg Borr told MoodyOnTheMarket.com, "As a newer resident of Eau Claire I am very excited to bring TJ's to the Village". Joe Matthews added, "Eau Claire brings back memories of the old Red Arrow Conference, and we look forward to seeing old friends and making new ones".

Borr and Matthews are lifelong friends who partnered in 2024 to open the second TJ's location, TJ's Baroda Tap. The original TJ's Sports Bar and Grill is located on M-140 at Territorial Road, South of Watervliet. Both establishments specialize in great sandwiches, reasonably priced entrees and cold beverages in a family-friendly sports bar atmosphere.

Borr told us the Eau Claire location will closely follow that script, but with a slightly shorter menu, "The menu will feature many of our mainstays but be a bit smaller due to size constraints in the kitchen. That said we are excited about a new concept "The Skillet of the Week".

Borr said the several week shutdown and changeover will be mostly focused behind the scenes at the new location, "The refresh focuses on the kitchen with updated equipment and in the bar area by adding equipment and increasing the draft taps to ten."

Pet Lover

The Pet Corner

If you've lived with pets for any length of time, you might have asked yourself these questions. I know I have.

Why does my dog bark at some dogs and not at others? Why does my dog take an instant dislike to a particular dog but love another at first sight? In Googling this, I found a lot of answers, the top one being Trigger Stacking. While on a walk, my dog might meet several dogs and is okay with them. But then, she sees other sites and hears unfamiliar noises (in our dog's case, sniffs too many smells). Soon, all the factors get stacked and hormones rise. Too many dogs, too many noises, and then seeing the third (or fourth or fifth) dog becomes too much and my dog loses her mind. We've all seen it happen. Dogs learn by doing. So, if barking and going berserk keeps that other dog away, my dog will do it again next time. Keeping calm is the best way to calm the dog and putting distance between them. That and avoiding a small space where the dogs feel there is no escape. This doesn't always work but is certainly worth a try. For many other suggestions on how to curb the problem, check out www.brilliantfamilydog.com. They have lots of ideas.

As to why my dog takes an instant dislike to a particular dog, my best guess is it's just like people. Some we like. Some we don't. Five dogs can walk by the house when Gracie is looking out the window, and she's okay. But let that certain dog go by, and we hear the hound dog's cry. Maybe that dog is giving off signals or vibes only another dog understands. Their reaction might be annoying, but dogs have peculiarities same as humans.

Another question I often ask is why does my cat love the new food I gave him today, eating it like this is the best thing my human has ever given me, only to turn his nose up the next day. As if he's saying, meh, I want nothing to do with this garbage. His fussiness is frustrating, but Sandwich will soon turn fifteen and is entitled to eat whatever his little heart desires. But I have to admit, I miss Zombie, who quietly ate whatever you put in front of him, every time, and then cleaned up what his brother left behind. I didn't have all those half-empty cans of cat food sitting in the fridge. The truth is, who knows why cats do what they do. I've given up trying to figure out a feline's mind. Yet kitties do offer the best comfort just by curling on one's lap and purring.

I'm All Sirius, It's Plain Tee See

A couple weeks ago, I received an unsolicited mailing, containing "Important Information!" about one of my vehicle's features. A feature my vehicle doesn't have. Well, wait, actually it does have it. I just don't use it.

See, the mailing contained a pitch to start a 3-month free trial of SiriusXM satellite radio. Which I could have in my vehicle if I so desired. (I have activated free satellite radio trials in the past, but never renew or extend the service. I've never helped SiriusXM go forth and prosper.)

The mailer included a list of all the SiriusXM channels. I perused it and realized that I really must have this service! As long as I can be "modified" with five more sets of ears to listen to everything I want to hear, and seven extra hours added to every day to do so.

I mean, c'mon! – where else besides SiriusXM am I going to get my daily fix of Les Tubes Franco (where Marc-Andre Pilon revisite une chanson originale[et patati et patat, which is French for "and so on"), or KidzBop ("Pop Hits Sung by Kids"), or Hair Nation ("How Are the Kardashians Wearing Their Hair Today?")?

Let me quickly say that I'm not poking fun at tubular Frenchpersons, or singing children, or the Kardash----wait a sec, I guess I am trying to poke fun at them.

Scanning the Sirius XM channel list can lead the weak-minded, like yours truly, off on scads of tangents. Here, let me prove it:

Channel 9 – The 90s on 9 – features programming hosted by Downtown Julie Brown, of early MTV fame. On the SiriusXM website, Brown's show promises to deliver "her special brand of Wubba Wubba Wubba…"whatever that means.

Wait, what? – they don't know what "wubba wubba wubba" means?! I had to know, so I scoured the web until I found this: While hosting the live show "Club MTV" one day, Julie was reading her cue cards and suddenly blurted out "Wubba wubba wubba" . . . which was printed on the front of the cue card guy's tee-shirt.

(Nowadays, Julie still relies on cue cards, and even the same cue card guy. But he's only allowed to wear plain tee-shirts.)

SiriusXM programming executives love – and I mean looooove – stations that play "classic" music. In the blurbs about what kind of content each station features, the word "Classic" is used over a dozen times. And that doesn't include the Classical Music and Opera/Classical Vocals stations.

However, one station is described as "Classic Alternative." This makes me wonder: If you've aged into being called a "classic," can you still be "alternative"?

Lots of big names have their own channels on SiriusXM – The Beatles, Bruce Springsteen, Garth Brooks, Elvis. This gives me a new life goal to shoot for: My own SiriusXM channel! It'll feature my columns being read by me and the scads of celebrities who will become my friends! Heck, one special week every year, I'll let all the readings be handled by Kardashians! (Of course they'll need cue cards; but I'll make sure the gal holding them wears only plain tee-shirts!!)

AI in Hearing Aids

For decades, digital hearing aids have had some form of sound processing and noise management built into them. Within the last few years, however, things have changed dramatically. With the adoption of artificial intelligence in a variety of applications, hearing aid technology has made a massive leap forward. These changes have a profound impact on how hearing aids function in almost every environment a person can encounter, resulting in huge strides for the listening enjoyment and quality of life of the hearing aid wearer.

One of the most important facets of AI in hearing aids is a system called a Deep Neural Network or "DNN." This network is the brain of the entire system, and is responsible for taking in formation, making decisions, and applying automatic adjustments to hearing aids when the hearing aid user's environment changes. The DNN, in conjunction with the user's hearing prescription, is designed to optimize hearing aid output no matter the situation.

In order to maximize hearing aid performance for the user, the DNN has to factor in countless variables at the same time, all at a processing rate on the order of single-digit milliseconds. These can include noise direction, room acoustics, head direction, user intention, and walking speed, just to name a few. In every environment, cutting-edge hearing aids are designed to analyze and adapt to changing conditions to ensure users have the best experience possible.

Analyzing the environment is only half of the process, however, so understanding how hearing aids adapt to that environment is equally important. Using the learning capabilities of artificial intelligence, researchers can now train hearing aids on tens of thousands of examples of different acoustic conditions, noise profiles, environmental sounds, and speech samples. With this "training" embedded in its programming, the hearing aid DNN can then listen to real-world surroundings, compare it to examples it has encountered, and make millions of micro-adjustments to optimize the user experience.

While all of this technology is impressive, the true impact of hearing aid AI is its ability to learn over time. With every day of use, hearing aids – specifically the DNN – gets more experienced and intelligent. The advantage of this automatic learning ability will only continue to improve over time, making the future of hearing aid users brighter than it has ever been. Seeking professional help for hearing healthcare can alleviate many of the common issues and headaches people worry about with hearing aids. Taking the first step is the most important part of the process, so call us
